Relief Director Nist Named to Service Post

MAYOR PICKS SUCCESSOR TO TRACY STYERT

Attorney, Former Secretary to Mayor at Canton, Takes Office Today.

GETS HUNTER'S PRAISE

New Director Termed 'Ideal Executive'; Relief Post to Be Filled Later.

Earl A. Nist, for the past seven months Mansfield and Madison township relief director, today was named safety-service director by Mayor Claude M. Hunter to fill the vacancy created by the death of Tracy C. Styert.

Nist, a practicing attorney for 25 years, was formerly safety director at Dover and spent two years as secretary to a Canton mayor.

He was the first CWA director of Richland county and later director of old district 9 of WPA, which included Richland and 10 other Ohio counties.

'Ideal Executive'

Mayor Hunter, commenting on the appointment of Nist said: "His law practice coupled with a wide experience in governmental affairs makes him an ideal executive for the position."

Nist's secretary position to the Canton mayor was under Herman R. Witwer, during the latter's first term, and followed eight months' military training at the Great Lakes Training station, Chicago, where he was stationed in 1918. He was appointed safety director of Dover after establishing a law office in that town.

Nist took over his new duties today. In the meantime the relief office will continue under the direction of the new service director until a new director is appointed, Hunter said.

He explained that under the city-county-Madison township set-up of administration a meeting would probably be held with these officials sometime this week before making an appointment.

Nist said today that he intends to carry out the administration's policies and "continue the work (Continued on Page 2, Col. 5)

Tax Books Close Saturday, Short of $570,000 Goal

With the county real estate tax books due to close Saturday, receipts today were still more than $271,000 short of the $570,000 goal County Treasurer John E. Kolb set for the current collection period.

Asserting that there will be no time extension granted, Kolb predicted that payment of large public utility tax accounts at the last minute would boost the receipts to near the normal figure.

Total second half period collections today amounted to $308,436, which included nearly $50,000 collected during the first three days of this week. Receipts yesterday were $14,010, while $12,377 was collected Tuesday and $22,630 Monday.

Payment of individual accounts by mail and large amounts to come in from outside collectors in Shelby and county villages also are expected to boost the receipts, the treasurer said.

PITTSBURGH—(AP)—The circumstances of Charles F. Gillmann's address made it front page news today. The president of World Vigilance, Inc., waited for his audience last night, then launched into a two-hour discussion of his plan to insure world peace by abolishing wars and strikes.

His audience—a newspaper reporter—stayed for the whole speech.

New Director

Shown above is Earl A. Nist, former Richland county relief director, who today was named Mansfield safety-service director by Mayor Claude M. Hunter to fill the vacancy created by the death of Tracy C. Styert. Nist will assume his new duties today. He will continue to direct affairs of the Mansfield and Madison township relief until his successor is named.

KILLS FUGITIVE CONVICT, JAILED

Bloodhound Keeper Accused of Murdering Prisoner Who Wanted to Surrender.

(By United Press)

CROCKETT, Tex.—Rob Parker, keeper of the bloodhounds at the Eastham state prison farm, was in the Houston county jail today charged with murdering an escaped convict who had offered to surrender.

The charge was made by Sheriff Archie Maples, member of the posse that had been searching for John Hendrix Frazier, 21 of Dallas, and Raymond Wilkerson, 24, of Fort Worth. When a warrant had been issued charging Parker with killing Frazier maliciously, Maples went to the prison and placed Parker under arrest. Wilkerson also was killed.

"Both of those boys were unarmed and were shot down in cold blood," Maples said. "He was not justified in firing on them."

Parker denied that the convicts had offered to surrender peacefully. He said he shot after he had commanded them to halt and they had not complied.

Maples said he would submit his case to the county grand jury today. Frazier and Wilkerson were two of eight convicts who broke out of the prison farm earlier in the week. Six of the eight are dead. A (Continued on Page 5, Col. 8).

'BREAK' DENIED

Eden's Successor Not at Odds With Premier, Report.

LONDON—(AP)—British government spokesmen today issued sharp official denials of reports that Viscount Halifax, foreign secretary, might resign because of differences with Prime Minister Chamberlain over dealings with Europe's dictators.

Reports current in diplomatic and other circles yesterday said that Lord Halifax had veered to the belief of his predecessor, Anthony Eden, that the time had come to deal sternly with the dictators.

Eden resigned Feb. 20 because he differed with Chamberlain's "realistic" policy of seeking understanding with the rulers of Italy and Germany.

Gives Hitch-Hiker a 'Lift', Costs Him $6,000 Camera, Car

J. C. Gregory, of Dayton, gave a hitch-hiker a 50-mile "lift" to Mansfield yesterday and as "gratitude" chalked up the loss of a $6,000 aerial camera and his automobile.

Gregory told police that he had left the hitch-hiker sitting in his car with the camera while he went into the office of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company. When he came out 20 minutes later, both were gone.

Gregory, an aerial photographer, said he was en route from Dayton to Cleveland and had stopped off to see Westinghouse officials about some business matters. He said he had picked up the youth in Delaware.

PROBERS TOLD LABOR LEADER JOINED 'REDS'

Woman, 'Mystery Witness,' Says U. S. Department Knew of Bridges' Connections.

TELLS OF AFFIDAVIT

Labor Department Dropped Deportation Case Despite Membership, Claim.

(By International News Service) WASHINGTON—The department of labor was in possession of sworn evidence that Harry Bridges, west coast labor leader was a member of the Communist party when the deportation case against him was dropped, Miss Margaret A. Kerr, Los Angeles "mystery" witness, told the congressional committee investigating un-American activities, today.

The comely Miss Kerr said she had obtained an affidavit from a member of the Communist party naming Bridges as a member of the communist party under the party alias of "Harry Dorgan." This document, obtained Feb. 15, 1938, was turned over to the late Senator Copeland (D) of New York, who forwarded it to Secretary of Labor Perkins.

Received Affidavit.

The affidavit, she testified, had been offered her voluntarily, as an officer of the Better American Federation of Los Angeles, by Irving N. Markheim, a member of the Communist party under the party name of "John Burton."

He came to me and said that he had Bridges' membership card in the Communist party and also in the international labor defense," Miss Kerr told the committee.

Examining what purported to be the complete department of labor file on the Bridges case, turned over to the committee earlier today by Thomas B. Shoemaker, deputy commissioner of immigration and labor, Chairman Dies (D) Texas, said that the file apparently did not contain the original affidavit which Copeland was supposed to have turned over to the department.

Papers Missing.

He said the file appeared only to contain a photographed copy. This he handed to Miss Kerr to examine. She said that parts of the affidavit were missing, including a document on the program of the Communist International and a photograph of Bridges.

When Shoemaker was on the stand he was closely questioned by committee members to determine whether he had brought the complete file in the Bridges case with him for the committee's use.

"Sometimes matters are so highly important and confidential that they are kept in a separate file," observed Rep. Starnes (D) Alabama.

"I think I have the complete file," he replied.

Canadian Town Announces Corral for Tying Horses, Teams.

QUESNEL, B. C.—(AP)—Not in the gay '90s, but in 1938 this legal notice appeared in a local newspaper: "The municipality has provided a corral at the corner of Front street and Johnston avenue and all persons desiring to tie horses or teams in the municipality are requested to use it for that purpose."

When they got to Mansfield, he said, the youth had told him that he was also going to Cleveland and would wait in the car for him. Gregory said he had not bothered to take the ignition keys from the machine.

He said the camera which he had purchased only six months ago was valued at $6,000 while the car, a light coupe was valued at $400.

He told police, who later broadcast the description of the youth and automobile that the hitch-hiker was 21 years old, six feet tall, weighing 190 pounds and had blond hair. He said the youth was neatly dressed. The camera was an Eastman, aerial type.

Says 'Little Fellows' 'Squeezed Out' by Schultz, Aids.

(By Associated Press)

NEW YORK—A dramatic story of "death ride" threats by members of the Dutch Schultz mob, in taking over control of the multi-million dollar policy racket, was told in supreme court today by Wilfred Brunder, 43, colored.

Testifying in the racket conspiracy trial of James J. (Jimmy) Hines, Tammany district leader, Brunder told how his partner in a Harlem policy "bank," Fred McLaughlin, was threatened with death by a carload of Schultz henchmen when he refused to turn over his policy business to the mob.

"I was quitting the racket," Brunder said, "and I told the mob that what was left belonged to Fred McLaughlin."

Fled In Fear.

Brunder said that shortly afterwards he "left town" and went to Detroit and then to Washington, D. C., to escape the mob's wrath. It was not brought out what happened to McLaughlin.

Earlier, Brunder had testified that when he came out of prison in 1932, he learned that the Schultz mob was "moving in" on the policy game and making it an air-tight racket.

He said another Harlem policy "banker," Joe "Spasm" Ison, told him Schultz had squeezed out small individual operators.

"Schultz has got a cold monopoly," Brunder quoted Ison as telling him.

As Brunder began his testimony, Defense Attorney Lloyd Paul Stryker interrupted with frequent objections.

Brunder told of a conversation he had shortly after he was released from prison, in which J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, the "kid mouthpiece" of the Schultz mob, George Weinberg, Schultz's chief lieutenant, and Ison tried to persuade him to join the racket. He was to get $100 a week.

"I told Davis I was not interested in the policy business owing to the fact that I was on probation, and I am worried about the (Continued on Page 5, Col. 2)

Funds Insufficient to Make August Pension Payments.

COLUMBUS—(AP)—Payment of old age pension checks for August will be held up until the state auditor's office receives enough money to pay all the pensions at once, it was announced today by Mayson Hayhurst, office manager in the auditor's office.

Hayhurst said that the amount to be paid pensioners for July, August and September was $1,208,700, but that there was not enough money in the fund at present to pay all of the August pensions, which are due now.

There was no indication of how long the payments would be held up. Hayhurst said, but it was probable it will be at least another week before funds are available to issue the pension checks under State Auditor Joseph T. Ferguson's plan to pay the entire amount at one time.

County Harvest Figures to Be High, But Prices Won't

Richland county farmers will be able to fill their cellars and grain bins to overflowing this year, but the bumper crops will produce small cash income and may be a boomerang in reducing farm prices to a non-profit level, County Agent George B. Ganyard predicted today.

Aided by ideal growing weather, major farm crops, including wheat, corn, hay, and potatoes, will yield well above normal, Ganyard said. Fruit production in the county, as in most of Ohio, will be below normal figures, however, due to killing frosts late in the growing season.

County farmers, who are completing their wheat harvest, are getting about half the price for their grain that they received last year, and a heavy corn yield promises to cut the price of that commodity, the county agent asserted.

Farmers who feed their corn to their hogs will fare little better, since hogs are selling at an average of nearly $3 per hundred under the 1937 market price, he pointed out. Beef cattle are off from $2 to $2.50 per hundred. Milk prices are considerably lower.

Only poultry and eggs are showing better on the market than they did last year, with both bringing slightly higher prices (Continued on Page 2, Col. 3)

Sleepers Can Snooze On Now

SHARPSBURG, Pa.—(AP)—The folk of Pleasant Valley, a nearby village, slept late this morning. Henry Hofer, the village blacksmith who had so much business that he started banging his anvil at 5 a. m. daily, bringing protests from sleepers, mused his dawn solo. "Good neighbor" Henry figured it out himself. He removed a padding of cork from beneath the anvil and fastened it to a sturdy log which muffles the clanging.

CONTEST LOOMS FOR HELM OF RICHLAND C. O. P.

Mansfielder Out for Post as 'Draft' Movement Starts for Shelby Man.

A contest for the Richland county Republican central committee chairmanship loomed today, with G. O. P. leaders attempting to draft Charles Swanger, Shelby barber, for the office and John Hess, first ward committeeman, campaigning for the post.

Members of the central committee—one from each of the county's 90 precincts—will meet at the courthouse Saturday night to choose a chairman and an executive committee which in turn will elect an executive chairman.

Ralph M. Hardy, Mansfield, present central committee chairman, is slated for the executive committee leadership, party leaders said. If elevated to the post, he will succeed Glenn L. Bierly, who has announced he will not seek re-election, due to the pressure of business.

Predict Acceptance.

Swanger, who has figured in Republican politics in the county for a number of years, had not consented today to be a candidate for central committee chairman, but party leaders in Mansfield predicted he would accept if elected.

Hess, youthful precinct committeeman, was said to be actively campaigning for the central committee post, and it was believed he has the backing of a committee group in Mansfield.

250 Cedillo Followers Fearing Death, Pursued by Troops.

MEXICO CITY—(AP)—Federal troops today pursued 250 followers of rebel General Saturnino Cedillo who have risen up in arms against the government of President Lazaro Cardenas. According to the war department, the rebels staged a new outbreak when they believed themselves threatened with death for their participation in the rebellion under Cedillo last April.

Congressman Pascual Gerardo was said to have led the 250 men from Ciudad Maiz in the state of San Luis Potosi into the surrounding hills.

STATE GIVES BOARD PERMIT FOR ELECTION

Tax Commission Approves City Request to Re-Submit Issue for Balloting Sept. 20.

PLAN NEW CAMPAIGN

School Officials Meet Friday to Complete Details for New City-Wide Vote.

The state tax commission today authorized the Mansfield board of education to hold a special election Tuesday, Sept. 20, on the board's proposed $550,000 school bond issue, defeated at the primary election last week.

Permission to resubmit the bond issue proposal was received this morning by Dr. John H. Bristol, clerk of the school board, who immediately called a special meeting of the board for 11 a. m. Friday to complete plans for the election.

File Formal Request.

A copy of the tax commission's authorization, along with the Mansfield board's formal request for an election, will be submitted to the county election board following the school board meeting tomorrow, Bristol said.

School officials said they would launch a new campaign to obtain the necessary 65 per cent majority vote needed to pass the bond issue. Emphasis, they said, will be placed on the fact that the bond issue must be approved by Mansfield voters before Oct. 1, or the city will lose a $450,000 federal PWA grant for new school buildings.

The grant was approved six days ago, with the provision that it be supplemented by $550,000 in local funds by Oct. 1 to permit the starting of construction work on the city schools' project not later than Jan. 1, 1939. All projects approved by PWA officials this year must be under construction by the first of next year, school officials were told.

Board Optimistic.

School board members were optimistic about the chances for obtaining approval of the bond issue at the special election, since the $450,000 PWA grant was made after the bond issue was defeated Aug. 9.

The bond proposal was beaten by 383 votes at the primary election. The official count was 5,546 votes for and 3,576 against the proposal.

If the issue passes next month, work will be started this fall on a $1,000,000 building project, including construction of a new John Simpson Junior high school, a new junior high school at Cline avenue and Wood street, a shop building addition at Senior high school, and (Continued on Page 5, Col. 3).

NEW EQUIPMENT

Hospital Installs $16,000 Devices for X-Rays.

New electrical and therapy machines, costing $16,000 are being installed at Mansfield General hospital which will make the city X-Ray equipment second to none in the country, according to an announcement today by Dr. A. O. Fonkalsrud, superintendent.

Electrical engineers from Cleveland are installing the machines this week and several are already in working order.

Included in the equipment is a deep therapy or treatment machine, used largely for treatment of cancer and its allied diseases; a new superficial therapy machine, used for the treatment of skin diseases; and a diagnostic machine which includes a fluoroscope and a radiographic machine which makes films of all the organs, bones and cavities of the body.

All of the equipment was made by the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing company at its Long Island plant.

The equipment will be under the supervision of the two new specialists who were added to the hospital staff July 1, Dr. Henry Stiles, roentgenologist, and Dr. Burr Hathaway, pathologist.

British Fears Grow Over Czech, Spanish Situations

TROUBLE SEEN FOR PREMIER'S FOREIGN PLAN

France Shares Great Britain's Anxiety Over Outlook; Resignation Hinted.

(By United Press)
LONDON — Potential dangers in the Czechoslovak minorities and Spanish civil war problems increasingly worried British leaders today.

Reports on negotiations between the Czechoslovak government and its German minority leaders, and on the Spanish nationalist reply to a proposal to withdraw foreign troops from the civil war, were awaited anxiously.

All But Reject Plan.
In negotiations at Prague yesterday German delegates all but rejected completely, government proposals for a minority statute.

It was believed certain that the Spanish nationalist reply on volunteers was a rejection in fact though not in letter.

It appeared increasingly probable that the Czechoslovak situation would become acute again in a few weeks.

October was mentioned as a likely crisis month as regards Czechoslovakia — after Viscount Runciman, British mediator, had returned to London.

As regards volunteers there was a feeling approaching conviction that none could be evacuated from Spain before late next winter at the earliest.

British relations with Germany were a part of the Czechoslovak problem. British and French relations with Italy were a part of the Spanish problem. In each case, trouble loomed for Prime Minister Neville Chamberlain's "realistic" foreign policy, based on seeking friendship with European dictators. Opposition opinion inclined increasingly to the opinion that surrender was the price of friendship.

Seek Compromise.
As regards Czechoslovakia, the government was expected to busy itself with efforts to effect some sort of compromise formula on which negotiations could be continued at Prague. As regards Spain, it was forecast here and in Paris that activity would be concentrated on saving the structure of the non-intervention agreement. It was expected that the non-intervention committee would meet here next week. France shared Great Britain's anxiety over the diplomatic outlook.

Finance problems complicated the diplomatic situation. There were rumors in Paris yesterday that Finance Minister Paul Marchandeau might resign, and the franc weakened. There also was a decline on the Berlin stock market.

Working committees for the 1938-39 season were named and the first play to be presented was announced last night when the board of governors of the Mansfield Community Players met at the home of Harry Lowrey, Parkwood boulevard.

Robert Sherwood's play, "The Queen's Husband," will be presented early in the season, either on Nov. 29 or Dec. 6. The two other plays will be selected at the next meeting of the board. Other dates set for the Community presentations are Feb. 7 and March 21.

Herbert H. Schettler was re-appointed to head the ticket committee and tickets will be sold by the women of the First Congregational church. The ticket drive will open early next month.

Other committees or chairmen named last night were: casting, Helen Bacon, director of the Players, Dr. Philmour Bein, Harry Lowrey, Mrs. Fred Tracy, and Miss Fae Sotherland; housing committee, Charles Fox, William Bloor, and Herbert Schettler; properties, Miss Kathleen Sturges; music, Laurence Todd, and publicity, Harry Devine.

The next meeting of the board will be held Sept. 14.

Up and Down THE STREET

A well known Mansfield hostess was left gasping the other day when her guests took her at her word as to what to wear to her party. One of them called her on a very hot day and inquired whether guests were going to "dress up" or dress for comfort. "Wear what you please," she answered lightly, "come in your night dress if you'll be more comfortable!" Imagine her reaction when that was exactly what they all did! The inquiring guest "tipped off" the others and they all dressed in their prettiest nightgowns and sleeping pajamas. The bridge was probably enjoyed more than any played during the heat wave.

Today was quite a day in the life of Nicholas Weamer, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. N. O. Weamer, 462 Park avenue west, and a student at Culver Military academy at Culver, Ind. Not only was it his 15th birthday but he was to receive the school's highest award — the Texas award — for a perfect score attained on the rifle range. Young Weamer, firing a regulation army rifle at rapid fire scored 50 bull's-eyes out of a possible 50 at 300 yards — no mean trick, army men aver.

Interest in the old fashioned game of horseshoes has increased tremendously in the last few years and because it appeals to both children and adults, horseshoe courts have been set up at most of the city playgrounds, and four horseshoe tournaments. It's the popular sport at Hedges park and the two courts at North Lake park playgrounds recently conducted are in use every night of the week. It is one of the few classic games that have survived the years, for "quoits" as played by the ancient Greeks and even by colonial Americans, is practically the same game.

Taking a dip in the old swimmin' hole was a costly sport for Bob Greer, Butler youth, he reported to Sheriff E. P. Long yesterday. Young Greer, with a group of companions sought relief from the heat in a creek near Butler, leaving his clothes on the bank. Later, when he was ready to go home the youth discovered that $11 was missing from his pocket. He told the sheriff. But there was a little consolation in the experience, the youth said. His clothes were still there.

JAPS ADVANCE

Claim Major Victories in New North China Offensive.

SHANGHAI — (U.P.) — Japanese forces, their drive on Hankow halted by Chinese defenses, claimed major victories today in a new offensive in North China.

The new offensive started in southern Shansi province, northwest of Hankow and above the Yellow river. The Japanese were attempting to drive through Puchow toward Sainfu, capital of Shensi province through which Russian supplies are routed from the north to Hankow.

A Chinese spokesman said the Japanese forces advancing from Lintsin, in southern Shansi, were halted at Kaolachen, between Lintsin and the Yellow river, where the Chinese were putting up staunch resistance.

In addition to being halted in the upper Yangtze valley, Japanese forces were beset by thousands of guerrilla fighters in all captured provinces. In Peiping, a Japanese spokesman admitted that several hundred Chinese troops had "penetrated" Tsinan, but said they were defeated.

(By Associated Press)
COLUMBUS—The largest Republican state platform convention in the party's history was in the making today with approval by state central and executive committees of a plan to name hundreds of advisory delegates to the Sept. 14-15 gathering here.

The committee set the convention date late yesterday and re-elected Ed D. Schorr of Cincinnati to his fifth consecutive term as chairman of both bodies. Other officers also were renamed.

Meanwhile a "call" for all newly elected members of the Democratic state central committee to meet here with present members next Wednesday was issued by Chairman Earl H. Hanefeld, state director of agriculture.

Charles Sawyer, Democratic gubernatorial nominee, has asked successful party primary candidates to confer with him here the preceding day.

Advisory delegates will be all the party's candidates for senatorial, congressional, state and county offices, county chairwomen, all elected county, city, village and township officials, and one delegate for each 500 Republican votes cast for governor two years ago.

POLICE ARREST 59 VAGRANTS IN 'SHACK TOWNS'

Central Market Area, Where Slayer Obtained Cartons, Scene of Inquiry.

CLEVELAND — (U.P.) — Police routed 59 unkempt vagrants from makeshift shacks in three "shanty towns" within a mile of downtown Cleveland today in their hunt for the phantom "torso slayer" of a dozen persons.

The men, some apparently in drunken stupor, were whisked to jail in a fleet of police vehicles. They were placed in cells to await questioning. Ten were found to have police records.

Investigators turned to two clusters of hovels, built from discarded crates, wood and metal, after evidence indicated two cardboard cartons containing parts of one of the killer's latest two victims came from scrap heaps in the nearby Central Market district.

Director Leads Poss.

Municipal Safety Director Elliott Ness, former federal agent, led 25 officers to a hillside colony a stone's throw from the market. Later the raiders visited another "shanty town" a short distance away. Then they moved on to an indigent community near Kingsbury run, the meandering stream near which the slayer's first victims were found in 1935.

When police descended on the motley quarters, the places were thrown into an uproar. Howls of mongrel dogs mingled with curses of surly dwellers, some of whom were ejected forcibly. Officers invaded more than 40 huts, bashing in doors when admission was refused.

The men in custody are typical of the homeless derelicts who have fallen under the maniacal killer's knife. Sgt. James McDonald said all would be fingerprinted on the chance victim No. 13 is among them.

Officers said the roundup was prompted by the question: Where in the densely populated market area is a place the slayer could keep victims' bodies for several months before disposing of them in parcels?

Dissected bodies of the surgically adept madman's 11th and 12th victims, a woman and a man, were found Tuesday in a lake front dumping ground.

FAIR ENOUGH!

Sculptor Pegler Brings To a Close Controversy With Bufano, His Rival

—By WESTBROOK PEGLER

NEW YORK—My little hot-weather controversy with Benjamin Bufano, the sculptor who has added a monumental monstrosity to the terrible total of American statuary, will now be tapped firmly on the head and laid to rest.

The San Francisco Press club is custodian of two checks for $100, each of which probably will be given to some fund for San Francisco children. Mr. Bufano suggested an outing fund, and that is a nice idea. My original intention was to start a purse to prevent the erection of his vast watertank memorial to St. Francis of Assisi, but that seems hopeless.

I recklessly offered to forfeit the hundred if I could not hew a better statue out of native New York rock with a bung starter and a carpenter's chisel. Mr. Bufano not only accepted the challenge but posted $100 himself under terms which are not very clear, even now. Then, as a sporting gesture, he sent me a sculptor's mallet and chisel. There has been considerable repartee about chiseling, most of it not so hot.

Finding myself stuck with my proposition, I induced Justin Sturm of Westport, Conn., a versatile artist, to lend a hand. Mr. Sturm may be remembered as a Yale man who made all-American during the time of Tad Jones at New Haven. He became a novelist and magazine fictioneer after the children's hour was over at Yale, published a couple of books and then went in for sculpture. He also plays the accordion.

He advised that the figure be modeled in clay, and the study, now cast in plaster, has been shipped to the San Francisco Press club, which seems to be the arbiter in the matter.

It has been reported that Mr. Sturm ghosted my statue, which is a figure of Mrs. George Spelvin and child, but that is not so. He is a real good sculptor. He makes finger nails and feet on his statues, which is more than Bufano did for St. Francis. He just furnished the clay and the studio and then, fascinated by a work which he thinks

My figure of Mrs. Spelvin and child includes a cornucopia, but two grapes and a pineapple were lost in the casting, so it may seem rather meager. I don't seriously think it is much prettier than Bufano's statue, but, judging by the original selection of the committee, I faintly fear they may decide to erect Mrs. Spelvin and child, 158 feet high, instead of St. Francis.

Mr. Bufano has been a good sport in this, and I salute him, but still insist that St. Francis is a terrible injustice to a well-loved city and saint.

Hollywood Speaks---

—By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD—You've heard about GOLF WIDOWS and BRIDGE WIDOWS. Meet the MAGIC WIDOWS.

They abound in Hollywood. Each is the victim of circumstance. She married a man who means something definite when he says "How's tricks?" He means just that: how's tricks? He means have you any new mysteries, any new gadgets, any new legerdemain in stock?

It was Chester Morris who told me about this hapless sisterhood. He told me about it between tricks out at his Beverly Hills shanty, beside the swimming pool.

It seems Chester's missus is one of the foremost sufferers. She bears up patiently, however. Probably because she knew, when she married Chester, that he was nuts about Magic. He has been, ever since he was 14.

The magicians of Hollywood meet regularly. One organization—Los Magicos—includes in its select membership such movie names as Harold Lloyd, Bert Kalmar, the song writer Max Terhune and Morris, besides a number of doctors, lawyers and professional magicians. Magic is not a vice peculiar to movie actors.

Well, the magicians have meetings and their wives go along. There is a program of magic, but it doesn't end there. The meeting place becomes a bedlam of tricks.

It must be fun for the wives. As Sue Morris said to Chet: "I don't mind watching the tricks, dear, but when you all start talking about Bridge Loads and Gimmicks and Threads it drives me crazy!" (Those are terms of the trade.)

And Mildred Lloyd, Chet suspects, is another victim. "But Harold," he says generously, "is not as annoying as I am. He goes in for mental effects—a mind-reading stunt he's been developing for three years. This is much less wearing on the household than my specialties. The Morrises," he chuckled, "are a house divided. Our Cynthia—she's 7—loves magic, already has mastered some tricks. Our boy Brook—he's 9—hates it."

And Chet can't see much hope for the Magic Widows. They can't even take up Magic in self-defense. They can never get revenge in kind. "The male of the species," said Chet, "is more devotedly in Magic than the female. Women have no gift for it."

Like all devotees, Chet keeps up on the new stunts, makes up new gadgets from blueprints, reads magic magazines, thinks it unethical to divulge trade secrets. In his workshop now is a monstrous device like a guillotine. The victim is to be clamped in tightly and the magician, nice guy, is to drive long spikes through his neck and wrists—the victim's not his own.

"This," said Chet, looking speculatively at my neck, "is going to be fun when I finish it. I'm sorry it's not finished today."

The hollow laugh was mine. Before I left I had to see the Morris trophy—silver, standing three to four feet high in the living room. He won it at the recent coast convention of magicians. If he gives the best original magic presentation at that meeting two more years straight he can keep it.

"Talk about academy awards! THIS," said Magico Morris, "is SOMETHING!"

Miss Fairfax Answers Questions

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX
Dear Miss Fairfax:
Looking back on the mistakes I have made, I know now that I should have taken an interest in something besides my home and my only son. He was a baby of three when his father died. And I had to work very hard to keep our little home together.
He was devoted to me till he was 16 years of age, and then I didn't like his associates. I tried to reason with him and sometimes I lost patience, especially when he'd come home with the odor of liquor on his breath. But now, how I would welcome him, no matter how he came home to me, for he has been gone three months, and I've never heard a word.
I gave up my job, and I have gone everywhere that I thought a trace of him could be found, but with no success. Have you any suggestions?
DISTRAUGHT.
The Bureau of Missing Persons has been successful in finding many people. Why not get in touch with them, through the police?
At the same time, I would try to make friendly contacts with some of these friends of his, and see if they haven't some light to throw on his absence. Teen age boys often run away, and if they don't get into mischief, they are more than likely to come back to the old home, which looms as a Paradise through hunger and hardships. And here's hoping he may see your letter.

Educate Yourself.
Dear Miss Fairfax:
I'm always glad when you advise girls in your column to take sufficient training to become independent, no matter what fate has in store for them. Today, as you have said, marriage no longer furnishes economic security to women. Even in the happiest marriages, both husband and wife have to work if there are children to keep and educate, because in the majority of cases, the husband's salary is not sufficient to insure a decent standard of living and a high school education for the children.
Nothing is more depressing than to see willing but utterly untrained women trying desperately to keep a home together when death or desertion has robbed them of a husband. Our family is known to be comfortably well off, but everyone of my daughters—I have four—have been trained for a profession or business. Let the good work go on. Continue to urge women to be capable of earning their keep, no matter what befalls.

PROGRESSIVE.
Delighted that this correspondent agrees with us, and considering what the government is offering in the way of training through

Tasty, Novel Cake Icings For Summer

By ALICE LYNN BARRY

WELL, IT won't be so long now before the baking season starts, so here we are with some delightful icings and frostings to go into your files. Once again we give recipes that use glycerine as an important ingredient. The addition of a little glycerine prevents the icing from sugaring or getting hard and brittle. Only, mind you, we don't guarantee that cakes with these icings will last till next day!

Honey icing requires one-half cup strained honey, one egg white, a tablespoon glycerine and a dash of salt. Boil glycerine and honey to soft ball stage (238 F.). Pour slowly over stiffly-beaten egg white to which the salt has been added. Beat until stiff enough to spread.

Tasty Frosting.
Yum Yum frosting is just "yum yum," that's all! Ingredients include three cups brown sugar, three-quarters cup water, two tablespoons glycerine, two tablespoons butter, three-quarters cup chopped nuts. Boil sugar and water to soft ball stage (238 F.). Pour slowly over stiffly-beaten egg white to which the salt has been added. Beat until stiff enough to spread.

Maple pecan frosting is another mixture that owes its delicious flavor to nut meats. It requires three-quarters cup maple syrup, two tablespoons granulated sugar, two tablespoons glycerine, one egg white and one-half cup broken nut meats. Place first four ingredients in top of double boiler over boiling water. Beat until stiff enough to stand in peaks. Remove from hot water, beat a few seconds longer and add nut meats.

Coffee Icing.
An icing with a coffee flavor is always popular. And this coffee icing recipe is especially flavorful. Ingredients include one-quarter cup butter, two cups confectioners' sugar, one and one-half tablespoons dry cocoa, two tablespoons glycerine and two or three tablespoons black coffee, hot. Cream the butter and glycerine. Add dry ingredients and enough hot, strong coffee to make the right consistency for spreading. Beat well.

Caramel icing is another delicious mixture that is guaranteed to glorify any cake. You will need one-quarter cup butter, two and one-quarter cups confectioners' sugar, one-half cup caramel syrup, two teaspoons lemon juice, two teaspoons glycerine and one-half teaspoon vanilla. Cream butter and glycerine; add sugar and mix together thoroughly. Add caramel syrup, lemon juice and vanilla and beat until thick and smooth. To make the caramel syrup, melt one cup granulated sugar over a slow heat. When melted and boiling, add one-half cup water. Stir until dissolved. Remove from heat and use as needed.

HOROSCOPE
For Friday, Aug. 19.
ALTHOUGH THERE are auguries of many interesting and successful activities on this day, judging by the lunar as well as mutual aspects, yet the general summing up would be one of "mixed influences" astrologically. There may be precipitous changes, probably unwelcome and startling. There may be a sudden spur, with high-pressure stimulus, to old matters, and new interests may hold peculiar angles or definite hazards, particularly as related to investments and finances. Be careful with papers. The intimate life also holds intriguing or mystifying angles.

If This Is Your Birthday.
Those whose birthday it is may find themselves precipitated into a year of intriguing, surprising and yet very strenuous and promising situations. New matters hold hazards, but discretion and caution may assist, while old matters receive fresh impetus. Be wise with finances and careful with papers.

Tomorrow's Problem.

HELP KIDNEYS PASS 3 LBS. A DAY

Doctors say your kidneys contain 15 miles of tiny tubes or filters which help to purify the blood and keep you healthy. Most people pass about 3 pints a day or about 3 pounds of waste. Frequent or scanty passages with aching and burning shows there may be something wrong with your kidneys or bladder. An excess of acids or poisons in your blood, when due to functional kidney disorders, may be the cause of nagging backache, rheumatic pains, leg pains, loss of pep and energy, grating up nights, swelling, puffiness under the eyes, headache and dizziness. Don't wait! Ask your druggist for Doan's Pills, used successfully by millions for over 40 years. They give happy relief and will help the 15 miles of kidney tubes flush out poisons from your blood. Get Doan's Pills.

Marriage Meddlers

Continuation of "Married Comrades"

I STARED at Dicky with a combination of consternation and relief when he said that if the "mess hadn't cleared up" by the time the small boys were due back at school, he would send them away to school and bring Katherine with Baby Faith and his mother into the city.

As the words fell from his lips, I realized that running beneath the turmoil caused by the dramatic happenings attending the coming of Queen Olga and Princess Olina to us for sanctuary, there had been the fear in my own mind of the danger to our children entailed by the presence of royalty so endangered by murderous plots.

With part of me, I was glad that he had determined to get them away from the farmhouse, but another thought—of Katherine's going—made me pause.

"I'd like that myself," I told him, "but Dicky, have you thought—Father has sent them to us, and with Katherine, Mother and me all away, won't it?"

Must Be Safe.
"Be pretty non-cricket to leave them with just Jim and Katie?" he finished for me. "Yes, I suppose it would, but that doesn't alter the question that the kids must be safe. They're all right here as long as the farmhouse is guarded, but trips to school. Nothing doing. You know Dad wouldn't want that himself."

Indeed, I did know how my father idolized his grandchildren. But I knew his military point of view, his devotion to his work and his government. I was sure that this sanctuary offered Queen Olga and her daughter in some way was tied up with treachery to our own government which he was ferreting out.

"Of course, we might get a tutor in," he mused, "but that would mean cooping the children up at home indefinitely. No, that's out. The other plan goes. I think old Harry and Lil will take over and pinch hit for us if we put it up to them. But there's no use worrying over it for the next half hour. Come on, let's get going."

Goes to Tell Mother.
Obediently I followed him out of the room, stood quietly while he locked the door and then gave me the keys.

"I'll just run along to my room and put these away," I said, "and then I'll go to the nursery and tell Mother about Queen Olga being upstairs."

"Ten to one she knows it already," he said. "Harry must have carried the lady up long before this."

"I suppose so," I said, glancing at the closed door of the room with the barred windows. But when I entered the nursery suite, Mother Graham was just putting Faith, fast asleep, back into her crib, and I knew that she had been oblivious to everything else, for Faith comes first with her, always.

She put her fingers to her lips, and I stole back to the door outside which Dickey had said he would wait for me until he found out whether or not his mother had lowered the shades in the rooms of the boys.

"No use my barging in if Mother's already been there," he had said, and I enlightened him in whispers.

Will See to Rooms.
"She hasn't been anywhere," I said. "She just got Faith to sleep. I haven't had a chance to tell her anything."

"Then I'll see to all the rooms, hers and yours included," he muttered back. "No use leaving any targets around. I'll tie the shades in the kids' room down so they can't raise them, and I'll waken Bill if he's asleep, and give him an earful about it. I'll be careful not to waken Hank."

I nodded assent, and left him

THEATER

THE announcement from the Hal Roach studio that Stan Laurel of the Laurel and Hardy team is through, has an authentic and final ring. On many an occasion the comedians have announced themselves that they were breaking up, and as a matter of fact Hardy did try one picture without Laurel. The sad-faced comedian has been riding for a fall for some time, but his too-frequent publicity over marital affairs with his Russian bride probably climaxed it. Illiana has been leading him a merry chase across front pages and columns. The Roach studio announced a new team with Hardy and Harry Langdon, which will be good news to Langdon's faithful followers who still consider him tops among the nuttier comedians.

Always a Winner.
Joe E. Brown isn't any Robert Taylor for looks or Gable for personality, but he always manages to get the gal in his pictures, and "The Gladiator" is no exception. He again manages to win the pretty co-ed right from under the handsome nose of his rival, but only after he has accomplished superhuman feats of strength.

abruptly, for I heard my mother-in-law coming into the outer room of the nursery suite, and knew that I had to give her my attention.

"I just wanted to tell you, Mother," I said, "that Mr. Underwood just carried Queen Olga upstairs to Mary's room."

"Who's with her?" she demanded.

"Katherine and her daughter, I am sure."

"Do they need anything I can do?" she asked eagerly. "Faith is asleep now, and I could leave her to go across the hall."

such as stopping a football team's tackle single handed, and throwing Man Mountain Dean, world's champion wrestler, around the ring. June Travis is the co-ed whose interest is divided between handsome Robert Kent and the generous-mouthed comedian. "The Gladiator" opens a three-day engagement at the Madison today.

Jane to the Rescue.
Jane Withers, who's getting to be "a big girl now," once more saves the family fortunes in "Keep Smiling" by doing the very things that nice little boys and girls are told not to do. She gets a good start by auctioning off her entire wardrobe, except the clothes she wears, to raise money for a Hollywood trip. And after she gets to the film capital, she raises Ned in general. But she sings and dances and imitates her way to stardom as a movie star, and her imbibing uncle is reinstated and his pretty secretary says "yes." Henry Wilcox and Gloria Stuart support the young star. The picture opens at the Ohio today.

Mystery at Majestic.
A mystery thriller and a western feature are booked at the Majestic for Friday and Saturday. "Danger on the Air" begins with a murder in a broadcasting studio in which a film executive is killed by a gas poison, administered in some mysterious manner. Donald Woods, as a radio engineer, solves the mystery. Nan Grey appears opposite Woods. "West of Cheyenne," an action film, brings Charles Starrett to the screen for the two-day bill.

Joneses in "Hot Water."
The doings of the Jones family, as shown in "Hot Water," will be the Ritz attraction tomorrow and Saturday, with Father Jones running for mayor, mother running after father, Roger running a scandal sheet, and Jack running after a blond. This popular movie family finds plenty to keep it busy when Jones decides to run for mayor on a reform ticket and directs his campaign directly at a road house of unsavory reputation. But complications arise when one of his sons gets mixed up in a little difficulty at the roadhouse. The second film is George O'Brien in "Gun Law."

BORDERLINE DOUBLES
If your partner, who had previously passed, makes a minimum response to your informative double, it is well to take stock. You know he lacked an opening bid. Even if he jumped in response to your double, he still could not have a very good hand. In such a case, you know the side could not make game unless your hand was well above the minimum needed for your double. There is then slight reason for application action on your part except when your partner's suit lacks any kind of support in your own hand.

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

South passed as dealer and West started the auction with 1-Club, which North doubled. East passed and South bid 1-Heart. When this passed around to North he put in a bid of 1-Spade. The club 10 was led by East and was covered by the Q and K. The club A was next won and followed by a club which North ruffed. The hand looked hopeless, so North decided to tackle the diamond suit. He led the 4 to the A, on which West played the 9. The second diamond lead was won by East, who cashed the J and led a fourth diamond for a ruff by West. West returned a spade, which was taken with the Q. The heart 10 was finessed to East's J and a spade returned. At the end declarer lost a heart to West's K, so that he was set one trick.

South would have been able to make 2-Hearts had North let the 1-Heart bid stand.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—
Without Colic—And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning!
The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Your whole system is poisoned and you feel sour, weak and the world looks punk.
A mere bowel movement doesn't get at the cause. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get these two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up." Harmless, gentle, yet amazing in making bile flow freely. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name. 25 cents. Stubbornly refuse anything else.

The Leaders In Their Field For Over 100 Years

AMERICA'S FINEST TWO PLOW TRACTOR

It has spring cushion seat with back rest; large foot rest platform; auto type steering, makes it as easy to drive as your own car. Tractor comes equipped with 6 cylinder friction free motor, self starter, rubber tires, adjustable fenders, pivot mounted lights, differential brakes, large belt pulley, power take-off shaft and many other features too numerous to mention on this page. You owe it to yourself to give the Graham Bradley a trial.

It plows an acre on as little as 1 1/2 gallons of gasoline and will work 200 continuous hours without changing oil. THAT'S REAL ECONOMY! It pulls two 14 or 16 inch plows at 4.4 miles per hour, easily and quietly. Takes care of all draw bar and belt jobs on farm up to 320 acres. THAT'S REAL POWER!

TRACTOR CONTROLLED HARROW
 Spring teeth are made of chrome vanadium steel alloy which has twice the strength of high carbon steel; exclusive with Bradley.

Compare this construction with that of any other harrow.

U. S. WILL HELP, CANADA TOLD

Roosevelt Tells Canadians America Will Give Aid in Event of Invasion.

made us vital factors in world peace whether we choose or not. "Happily, you and we, in friendship and in entire understanding, can look clear-eyed at these possibilities, resolving to leave no pathway unexplored and no technique undeveloped which may, if our hopes are realized, contribute to the peace of the world. Even if those hopes are disappointed, we can assure each other that this hemisphere at least shall remain a strong citadel wherein civilization can flourish unimpaird."

"The Dominion of Canada is part of the sisterhood of the British nation. I give to you assurance that the people of the United States will not stand idly by if domination of Canadian soil is threatened by any other empire."

Mr. Roosevelt, traveling in a special train from Washington was welcomed in the station of this Ontario university town by Prime Minister McKenzie King, and other Canadian dignitaries. At the university the president was awarded the honorary degree of doctor of law.

After a luncheon with government and university officials, he will drive to the international bridge through the Thousand Islands, for another speech this afternoon.

The market is so flooded with potatoes that growers can sell only limited quantities at a time, and then at prices that cut the producer's profit to almost nothing, Ganyard added.

A survey shows that articles the farmer sells are bringing about 92 per cent of the pre-war price, while the things he must buy cost 124 per cent of the 1910 to 1914 level, Ganyard said.

"There can be little hope of complete farm recovery until a better balance between the farmer's buying and selling prices is effected," he declared.

HELLO AMERICA ON LIBRARY'S NEW BOOK LIST

Author Writes About Royal Families, Radio Talks of European Notables.

The student of present day personalities, as well as radio enthusiasts, will be interested in Cesar Saerchinger's "Hello America," which is being added to the Public Library this week. Its sub-title is "Radio Adventures In Europe."

Saerchinger was the first radio representative sent abroad, and in his book he tells how he got famous people of Europe to speak on the radio for American audiences. It includes chapters on King George and members of the British royal family; a chapter on the Pope, one on well known British authors, and another on political dictators and political leaders. One section of the book deals with the technical aspects of transatlantic broadcasting.

Other Non-Fiction.

Other non-fiction new to the library this week is "Snow on the Equator," by Tilman, "Mechanical Refrigeration and Service," Snyder, "Beyond Dark Hills," Jessie Stuart, "Machine Age In the Hills," Ross, "These Are the Virgin Islands," Cochran, "Great Short Biographies," Clark, "Mr. Punch's Limerick Book," by Punch (periodical); "Growing Up In New Guinea," by Mead, "Secret Letters of the Last Tsar by Nicholas II, Emperor of Russia," and "Wanderings of an Artist" by Kane.

"American Years," by Harold Sinclair, was a recent selection of the Literary Guild. It is a novel based on the founding and growth of a typical mid-western American city. It has no central character except the city itself, which rumor says is Bloomington, Ind. Beginning with the first settlement about 1830, the story carries the community and its inhabitants down to the outbreak of the Civil war in 1861. Many delightful characters are introduced and the result is an interesting picture of the time and the place.

Two other historical novels appear this week on the fiction list. "Pointless Knife" by Constance Dodge, a story of Scotland in the 17th century, and "Great Lord," the story of a Polish nobleman in the time of Napoleon.

Five other fiction books were added this week. "They Found Him Dead," by Hoyer, "Salute to Yesterday," Fowler, "Wilderness Patrol," Stoddard, "Best Short Stories of 1938," compiled by O'Brien, and "The Past Must After," by Guerard.

The list of 1938 reading circle books for Ohio school teachers has also been made available at the Mansfield library. The list includes: "Modern Practices In Elementary School," by Jacobsen, "Developing Teacher Personality That Wins," Sanford, "Teaching the Social Studies," Wesley, "Directing Study Activities In Secondary Schools," Brink, "Our Children In a Changing World," Rexburg & Fritsch, "Extra Curricular Activities In Elementary Schools," Allen, "Community Backgrounds of Education," Cook, and "Learning the Three R's," by Hildreth.

GALION — A daughter was born Monday evening to Mr and Mrs Robert Hoover of 526 South Market street, at the Good Samaritan hospital.

Book of the Week

"... AND TELL OF TIME," by Laura Krey; (Houghton Mifflin; $2.75).

"Gone With the Wind" came unexpectedly out of the South as the result of a certain publisher's exploration. Another book which inevitably will be compared with Margaret Mitchell's long novel has come out of St. Paul, Minn., as a result of another publisher's nosing around. This one is called "... and Tell of Time." It also is by a Southern woman.

The name is Laura Krey. Mrs. Krey admits to 47 years, a family and a powerful urge to put words on paper. She was born in Galveston, has lived in Texas and Virginia as well as Minnesota. Wherever she has lived she has put down roots, and has taken up from the soil much nourishment. Her novel is the notable fruit of that process.

It begins when the War Between the States is ending, and very quietly Little by little out of a good deal of exposition and detail, the outline of the story emerges. We see that one Cavin Darcy, whom we meet in Virginia trying to get back to Texas with his body-servant, is to carry much of the story. Presently Cavin has made his way to some relatives in Georgia, and it is evident that he is to marry his cousin, Lucina Lytleton, and take her home to Texas with him.

There is a full picture of the war's aftermath in Georgia, before the young couple takes ship for Galveston. Luckier than some Georgians, the Lytletons have at least the shell of their plantation house left—one by one, a few of their Negroes return, disgusted with "freedom." Without shoes, clothes, tools or money, the Lytletons start the journey into the future nobody can foresee. And Cavin and Lucina start their journey to Texas, where a different sort of reconstruction is beginning.

Almost moment by moment, Mrs. Krey tells her story to its end somewhere in the nineties. It would be silly to pretend that she always has written "distinguished" prose, or that there are no dull places in her narrative. An author's thought must be remarkable to ramble as much as Mrs.

Krey's does without occasional loss of effect.

It is important however that the writing moves that it seldom undertakes fine flights, that it is a serviceable vehicle for a long journey such as this.—By J. S.

Books For Children

Sir James and Lady Frazer have written a very amusing little book called "Pusha the Pom, the Story of a Little Dog."

Pasha was a little white Pomeranian, who was sent to the Troisels in Paris, because his owners had to go to Brazil. The Troisels were an elderly couple who lived with their niece Pauline, their maid Jeanne, and their 12-year-old cat Snowball. It was a well-ordered household until the advent of Pasha, who was lively and rather spoiled. His coming changed the lives of every member of the family.

There are very few stories about Pomeranians, and dog lovers will find this little book a welcome addition.

When proletarians get into power, the first thing they do is turn the job over to a dictator.

Habit is so strong that some old-fashioned people are already starting to save up to buy their next winter's coal.

Despite Jimmy Roosevelt's explanation, the method by which an inexperienced college graduate can jump into the insurance business and make more than $20,000 the first year is still a mystery.

Would Safeguard Old Age Pension System.

PROVIDING for the care of aged persons who are no longer able to meet their own needs has long been recognized by the majority of people as a public obligation.

No more discreditable example of political chicanery appeared in the recent primary campaign than that in which one candidate for high state office appealed to the credulity of old age pensioners with the intimation that continuance of their pensions depended on his nomination and election.

Credited with pioneering in sponsoring the pension movement, the Fraternal Order of Eagles, in national convention, now resolves to promote further legislation intended to safeguard the system against abuses by unscrupulous politicians.

Freed of the fantasies that have been injected into it by impractical theorists, the idea of old age pensions for elderly persons who have been unable to lay aside sufficient surplus to provide for themselves, is entirely sound.

In a general way, it may be assumed that all the beneficiaries under an old age pension system, have made contribution of necessary work to the extent of their ability, and that an obligation rests on the more fortunate to share of their surplus in providing the comforts of life for these aged people during their final years.

While first responsibility for care of aged persons naturally rests on their children, or members of their immediate family, modern complexities have made it necessary to devise a more comprehensive plan under which all earners unite, through their agencies of government, in contributing to old age pension funds—so that no worthy old people will be neglected.

This is too fine a humanitarian function of government, however, to be bandied about in partisan politics or to be degraded into a money-making racket by either charlatans or fanatics.

The old age pension system in Ohio, and in other states, should be given constant, intelligent study along lines of improvement in its administration and expansion of its benefits—but pension progress must come from application of sound judgment rather than wishful thinking.

Excessive Horn-Blower Classes Low.

PROBABLY most obnoxious of nit-wit drivers are those of the habitual horn-blowing type—those who "lean on the horn" when they're in a traffic jam; honk viciously to clear cross walks; signal their arrival in front of a house, or drive blaringly along a residence street at excessive speed in the middle of the night.

Quoting an editorial in the Chicago American: "The man in the car is saying: 'I'm in a hurry, get out of my way.' Or maybe he is saying: 'I'm too lazy to get out and ring the doorbell to summon my friends.'"

More than that, he is showing that he is a second-class driver, according to Dr. Miller McClintock, of Yale university, one of the country's top-notch safety experts. In a current issue of the National Safety Council's Magazine, Public Safety, Dr. McClintock is quoted as saying:

"Many of the best drivers don't use their horns half a dozen times a year. If you go blasting your way along the road, you identify yourself as a second-class driver. Pride, if nothing else, should prevent you from doing that."

Public Safety points out that in countries where horn-blowing is forbidden the accident rate has dropped and asks: "What American city will first reap the fame of pioneering?"

Children's Tragedy In China.

THE "wild boys" of Russia, orphans of the World war and of the Communist revolution, have almost been forgotten, but their tragic story is now being repeated by Chinese children. Reports come of packs of "wolfish waifs" who roam the streets of Shanghai, stealing, fighting, snatching what food they can find wherever they find it, begging, robbing, dodging the authorities with uncanny skill.

The depredations of adult armed robbers, it is said, are mild when compared with the raids of these desperate children.

"Gaunt little bodies, wizened by fear and hunger," says one report, "these nine and ten year olds have found that loot from the shattered houses and shops give them a meal and hope of another."

Many younger children, unable to join in this fierce competition, die of starvation and exposure and their blue little bodies are found daily in the streets.

War does this to helpless and innocent children. And to the shame of supposedly civilized society, hardship and neglect do similar dreadful things to children even in America.

August Allergy.

HAY FEVER, according to reports from various places, has come earlier than usual this year. Normally it is expected from the middle of August to the end of September.

Incidentally a health official says "hay fever" is a very bad name for this ailment, because very little of it comes from hay. It seems to be mostly a ragweed menace, but may be caused by various grasses and trees, chicken feathers, dogs, cats, cucumbers and other things.

About the only name that seems to fit all round is the Greek term "allergy." But there are too many kinds of allergy to make that term suffice.

Have you stopped to think that dear little Nira, named in honor of the Blue Eagle, is now five years old?

The great modern quest is for new things to tax.

Watching Trends

—By PRESTON GROVER

WASHINGTON — Notable dates:
1918—Armistice.
1928—Kellogg pact outlawing war.
1938—War outlawed; nations just fight it out.

Perhaps it is the surroundings, or the tradition, but whatever it is, the faces of recent secretaries of state all look curiously alike, at least when done in oils. In Secretary Hull's reception room, where he meets the press, are paintings of five recent secretaries of state. Some have mustaches, and some not, but all have a certain restrained nobility-of-purpose look about their faces as if the artists had wanted to give them a dash of George Washington at Valley Forge.

Secretaries Lansing (under President Wilson), Colby (also under Wilson), Stimson (Hoover), Hughes (Harding and Coolidge), all wore mustaches, with Hughes supplementing his with the same style of beard he now wears as Chief Justice. Kellogg (under Coolidge) was smooth shaven, and so is Secretary Hull. Strangest of all is that Secretary Hull already has the look of a secretary of state done in oil for posterity—and his portrait has not yet been hung in the chamber.

But Is It Loaded?

IT DOESN'T mean anything in particular, but the state department has a five-inch naval gun trained right on the president's office. If it were discharged it would send a hundred-pound slug through the private door into which Bryan-Truster Tommy Corcoran supposedly dodges without so much as a by-your-leave from the guard.

From there the projectile would zing across the top of Greeter Pat McKenna's desk in the main lobby of the executive offices, sail under Secretary Marvin McIntyre's nose and into the president's office. He probably would be glad to see it come. He hasn't added a naval souvenir to his desk collection in many months.

This government can't be accused of failing to emphasize its good neighborliness toward the Central and South American republics these days, even though the dispute with Mexico over seized oil and farm lands makes a nasty situation. (This government has to be pretty stern about that else there might be a whole wave of expropriations throughout the Spanish and Portuguese-speaking republics.)

Telegrams to Presidents.

BUT outside of that, no effort is spared to do the good neighbor act. Within the last three months or so the president has sent brief telegrams of good wishes to every Latin-American president who has had a birthday. Some have received telegrams of congratulation on national anniversaries.

At the 400th anniversary celebration of the founding of Bogota, the chief city of Colombia, a plane crashed into the crowd, killing 50 persons.

President Roosevelt promptly sent messages expressing his gladness at the escape of Alfonso Lopez, outgoing president, and Dr. Eduardo Santos, incoming.

Incidentally, the state department has stopped calling them "Latin-American" republics. Now they are called simply American Republics. If it is necessary to be more specific, they are called Central American Republics, or South American Republics.

LaFollette 'Gets Places' With Probe

—By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON — Senator LaFollette's civil liberties committee, winding up its prolonged investigation, is getting down now to the job of framing some proposed legislation with a view to guaranteeing that the folk shall really have a bit more civil liberty than heretofore.

There is this to be said for the LaFollette, late father and his sons: They are not mere fault-finders. Seeing conditions which they consider undesirable, this instinct is, not simply to complain about them, but to dig down after causes and then fight for the adoption of definite remedies. They are a constructive, not a purely destructive, family.

Robert M. LaFollette

And when they go after causes, they get them. For example, in the recent course of "young Bob's" investigation a state of affairs was revealed which harrowed up the feelings of—

Whom would one think? Ardent civil liberty-ites? Folk in sympathy with the inquiry? Oh, yes, of course, but who else? Why, they harrowed up the feelings of Tom Girdler of "little steel." They uncovered stories of employer espionage on labor, of employer unkerling with publicity and even with the clergy, of employer reliance upon gas bombs and firearms that Girdler, hard boiled as he is, literally could not permit to go unchallenged.

He was not subpenaed. He had to ask to be permitted to come and testify.

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

GIRDLER

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

"Sure," said the committee. "We will hear your side."

But when Girdler did come he was not overly convincing. His account was that, if all these goings-on actually had GONE ON, he did not know it. Girdler, himself, did not defend such activities. He pleaded ignorance of them only.

In effect, he admitted the necessity of regulation.

Coming from Tom Girdler, this was quite an admission.

So-called anti-monopoly investigation appears to be starting off on similar lines.

Senator O'Mahoney's committee is after facts—not trying to convict anybody of anything.

It recognizes that there is a disease, which it is endeavoring to diagnose and then prescribe for.

BUT THIS—

I am not so enthusiastic for Martin Dies' investigation of anti-American tendencies.

Dies is anti-Nazi, anti-Fascist and anti-Communism.

So are a plenty of folk. But that does not imply they are much afraid of Nazis, Fascists or Communists—at least not locally.

German-Americans in this country date back largely to the Germans who swarmed in here because, in the 1840's, they hated the native German intolerance. Italians came long before fascism was invented. Russians? They were chased out of the Muscovite empire because they loathed it.

These immigrants (generally of second generation) are the loyalist kind of Americans, because of their original backgrounds.

ANTI-MONOPOLY PROBE

Senator Joseph C. O'Mahoney's

the millions of consumers must pay back with interest.

They do not understand the source of the money distributed as gifts, nor the serious problems that are created by the huge gift-policy. They are for the president because he is giving them money and because they believe he will continue the gift-policy. It isn't necessary for those in charge of relief work to tell them how to vote. They know the president in his private talks, and campaign speeches may be depended upon to keep the country posted on the type of men he wishes the voters to support. They understand what the assistant director of the WPA meant when he said "We've got to stick together. We have got to keep our friends in power."

The administration gift-policy, it is believed, is putting millions of voters on the block for sale. To get this vote political parties will be forced to bid against each other with reference to the number of billions promised as gifts.

Such a political condition is degrading, immoral and antagonistic to the very foundation of democracy. The defense and perpetration of such a system is little less than a national scandal.

Charity under political control and dictation is about the lowest type of charity known, and the distribution of charity, under partisan political control, represents the lowest type of political charity. To mix politics and charity means to degrade both.

Under a partisan system of distributing millions of dollars as gifts to millions of voters, perhaps one-third of the population have been made dependents. The creation of dependency thus becomes a fixed policy. Constitutional American democracy is based fundamentally on the independence of the citizen. A "dependent" is a ward of the government. This is really very serious. A nation of dependents would be a nation of weaklings, without pride, without self-control, without stamina.

The policy of the administration has been to turn over the billions appropriated by congress to the president, and let him distribute the fund as he pleases. As a natural result of this policy, the millions seeking special aid regard the president as their benefactor—the gifts come from him. To them he is the great giver, the great humanitarian, the friend of the poor and needy. They do not realize that the money he is giving away is borrowed money that

Editor News-Journal:

When a community loses a citizen of high character, such as Tracy Styer, that community's loss is great indeed.

A man who numbered his friends by the thousands, and as time passes his good qualities will be remembered, and emulated.

Tracy Styer was a self-made man. From a small beginning he forged ahead to become a leader in the financial, business and social circles of our city.

For years he was one of the leading sponsors of the city parks and playgrounds. He loved good horses and baseball, and was always known as a clean sportsman of the highest type.

To know him was to like and respect him. His benefactions were many. Neither color nor creed entered his mind when called upon to respond to an appeal for help.

The memory of this genial soul will linger long and lovingly in the minds of his friends. This tribute is from one who knew him since his boyhood days as a true friend.

Serve Your Family By Serving Your Nation.

—By ELSIE ROBINSON

(What is the trend of thought in America today. What are the problems that beset your neighbors, from rural crossroads to sophisticated metropolis? Elsie Robinson throws open her column as a clearing house for letters from all America to all America, giving you an opportunity to see your world and yourself through the Other Fellow's eyes.)

B EEN following the series this week of "SEZ THEY"? If you haven't, you've missed some grand broadcasts. And while they are coming, face this riddle presented by Allen D. Carter of San Antonio, Tex.

CAN WE SERVE OUR NATION BEST BY LIVING OUR PERSONAL LIVES AS WELL?

AS WE CAN AND NOT BOTH-ERING ABOUT ABSTRACT ISSUES . . . OR . . . SHOULD WE STUDY AND WORRY OVER MASS PROBLEMS . . . WORLD CONDITIONS?

Newlywed Allen D. Carter and his charming and sincere young wife believe, strongly, in the former method. Listen—

Dear Elsie:

Have you noticed that the majority of your contributors are single? Young married folks haven't the time to think about mass problems, they're too much concerned with their own private and family troubles! And listen, Elsie, that's about the way life goes. Leaders in public life and people who've been fortunate enough to attain success, and young people with not much else to worry about, take the time and can afford the time to worry about the state of the world.

But I, and my wife—and all those like us—we're concerned most with being good husbands and wives, good mothers and fathers, good companions and good providers. And that takes lots of doing. Listen again, Elsie! If every one of us would try a whole lot harder to make good at being married, we would automatically grow into better people and better citizens.

I don't know how to get rid of war and crime and crooked politics, and I don't think the masses have much to do or say about those things; but I do know that a nation of husbands, trying to be better husbands, and wives trying to be better wives, is going to be a pretty swell nation!

Allen D. Carter—age 23. San Antonio, Texas.

That's a sincere letter, son—and a loyal and devoted one—and I respect it with all my heart. But, because I do respect your attitude, let me tell you a few facts.

"The majority of my contributors are NOT 'single.' They are married people, busy people, worried people. They are people at grips with life. AND THEY HAVE LEARNED THAT THEY CANNOT GET FAR IN THAT STRUGGLE UNLESS THEY KNOW THE TRUTH ABOUT LIFE . . . ALL LIFE."

Remember, son, I—and millions who are reading your letter—have been all the things you want to be—good parents, good citizens. BUT YOU CAN'T BE A

Lyle is writing four books, the first of which is already on the market, and under his hand are some 85 assistants doing research, compiling data on early Louisiana history and in general accumulating a fund of material that has never before been available to the public.

Saxon's first book is the "New Orleans City Guide," a magnificent piece of work that begins with the days of LaSalle, and ends with present New Orleans.

HIS second, well underway, is a guide to Louisiana, doing for the state as a whole what the first has done for this city. A third will deal with folklore in Louisiana, and the fourth takes up the history of the Negro from the time he was chained in the hold of slave ships to the present day.

This represents exhaustive research and, as Saxon tells you, "All of my previous books took so long that often I was months on end doing research before the actual writing got underway. With 'LaFollette the Pirate,' for instance, I was a whole year accumulating data before a line was set down on paper."

But when Lyle was writing that book, and "Fabulous New Orleans," and "Father Mississippi," to name a few, he was doing all the work himself. Now he has a staff of 85 doing the heavy chores. He thinks the considerable sum in money sacrificed by this assignment will amply be repaid him when this accumulated data comes into his hand.

LYLE SAXON is an amiable, easy-going, big, gray-haired, 46-year-old fellow with a talent for conversation and a fine appreciation of were-wolves, ghosts, witches, eccentrics and pirates. He makes his home at the St. Charles hotel and counts among his friends William Faulkner, Carl Carmer and his wife (the former Betty Black of New Orleans), Sherwood Anderson, Roark Bradford, and many others.

As for his private work, now interrupted by the writers' projected novel which deals with the career of a Southern family from the days of reconstruction to the present. His most recent book was "Children of Strangers," based on the rather delicate subject of people who believe they are white—but aren't.

As for pleasant surprises, there have been two within the year, things that pleased him very much. One was when Cecil B. DeMille bought his book "LaFollette the Pirate" and made it into "The Buccaneer." The second was when Pare Lorenz produced the film "The River," and then told everybody that of all books written on the Mississippi, the two which seemed most authoritative to him were "Life on the Mississippi" by Mark Twain, and "Father Mississippi" by Lyle Saxon.

COVETED POST AT STAKE IN 'PURGE' FIGHT

O'Connor's Victory Would Put Rules Committee in Hands of Roosevelt Foes.

(By Associated Press)

WASHINGTON — Administration control of the strategic house rules committee is at stake in President Roosevelt's fight to unseat Rep. John O'Connor of New York.

If O'Connor is renominated and reelected, domination of this committee—which determines the legislation to come before the house—may pass into the hands of anti-administration congressmen.

O'Connor is chairman. Nine other Democrats and four of the Republicans are members. Four of the Democrats—Sabath of Illinois, Greenwood of Indiana, Harlan of Ohio and Lewis of Colorado—generally are considered Roosevelt supporters.

Four others—Cox of Georgia, Smith of Virginia, Clark of North Carolina and Dies of Texas—backed the president on the wage-hour bill. Some of them also have opposed various other administration measures.

Already Eliminated.

The other Democratic member, Driver of Arkansas, already has been eliminated because he lost his race for renomination to E. N. Gathings.

Driver opposed the wage-hour bill. Assuming the number of Democratic committeemen remains the same in the next session, his defeat will give the administration leadership in the house an opportunity to put a New Deal supporter into his place.

All other Democratic committeemen have won their primary campaigns except O'Connor, Cox and Lewis, who are yet to come up for nomination. Cox is opposed in the Georgia primary by W. J. Crowe, an avowed New Dealer.

If all the Democratic members aside from Driver are renominated and reelected, the balance of power on some issues might lie with the Republican committeemen.

Such a situation would place the White House in a highly disadvantageous position for pushing legislation through congress. The committee demonstrated its strength in the last congress when it blocked for almost a year house action on wage-hour legislation.

O'Connor was listed among supporters of the wage-hour bill but his break with the administration came when he led house opposition to the president's government reorganization bill.

Committee chairmanships in the house normally go by seniority, but there is some belief the administration might take an extraordinary course if O'Connor is re-elected. It could ask house Democrats to vote in a caucus to remove the New Yorker from the committee.

CORN GROWERS WELCOME RAIN

Hope Showers Will Rectify Damage Caused by Hot Weather.

CHICAGO—(AP)—Rain came to virtually all sections of the corn belt this week just when farmers were beginning to worry about the corn crop, now in the pre-maturity stage.

A survey today showed that some damage had been caused to corn by hot weather and lack of moisture in some areas. Principally west of the Mississippi river, but observers expressed hope recent rains would materially improve crop prospects. Temperatures were six to 10 degrees above normal last week.

Woman Who Once Admitted She Killed 'At Least 100' Dies.

TAUNTON, Mass.—(AP)—Death focused the spotlight for the last time today on Jane Toppan, 81, a "quiet old lady" who once told Newsmen she killed "at least 100 persons."

Once described as "one of the most infamous poisoners of the world," she was acquitted of murder by reason of inherited insanity and committed to the Taunton State hospital for life in 1902.

Her victims included Capt. Abner Toppan and his wife, a Lowell couple who took her as an infant from a Boston founding home.

situation of getting myself in trouble," Bruner said.

"Then Davis said: 'Has Spasm—meaning Joe Ison—told you nothing? No? Well, there is nothing to worry about now. All you have to do is do as you are told and keep your mouth shut.'"

Huris 'Bribe' Charge.

After Bruner left the stand, the name of the late Magistrate Francis Erwin, listed by District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey as having been "intimidated, influenced or bribed" by Hines in connection with the racket, was injected into the trial for the first time.

Erwin's name was brought up in testimony by the state's next witness, Camille Monsanto, 48, a British West Indian, who was employed by a policy banker in Harlem.

Monsanto testified he was arrested with about 30 others in a police raid in 1932, and that when he was arraigned before Magistrate Erwin, with Dixie Davis as his attorney, the magistrate dismissed the entire group after asking the arresting officers whether they had seen any policy slips sold.

Assistant District Attorney Saul Gelb, taking over the questioning, said that Erwin's concern of "sales" was ridiculous, since slips were merely tabulated at a policy "bank" and never sold there.

A policy or numbers "banker" in Harlem for seven years, Bruner, had begun a detailed description of the lottery yesterday when his testimony was interrupted by a defense demand that some connection be shown between Hines and the racket he is charged with aiding.

Though protesting, Dewey promptly produced a confessed henchman of Schultz—ranger, broad-shouldered George Weinberg, who was indicted with Hines but turned state's evidence—to "put the finger" on the Tammany boss.

Tells of Conference.

Halted at every other sentence by defense objections, Weinberg testified that Hines attended a 1932 conference at which arrangements were made to protect the numbers racket from too much official interference.

The grizzled Tammany boss received a $1,000 retainer from Schultz at the racket boss' apartment, the witness added, and Schultz ordered Weinberg to give Hines $500 to $1,000 a week.

"I was told by Schultz to make my arrangements to get in touch with Hines whenever I needed him," Weinberg said, explaining he had told Hines that Schultz and his associates wanted policy cases settled in magistrates' court and not "downtown in special sessions," and that police raids should be curbed.

"Hines went on the payroll and promised to deliver," Dewey had told the jury in his opening statement, as he sketched the growth of the racket in which, a 13-count indictment charges, Hines shared control and profits.

Policy arrests then dropped one-half, Dewey said. A case against a $4,500,000 policy bank was dismissed and—here Dewey brought in the elusive but significant political element in the case—Hines elected William C. Dodge district attorney in 1933 with the aid of "gangster floaters" and Schultz money, the prosecutor charged.

Denied Mistrial Motion.

Already incensed by Dewey's charges, which he told the jury were based on "diabolical falsehoods" and "the rankest perjury," Hines' chief counsel, Lloyd Paul Stryker, first demanded a mistrial because of Weinberg's testimony.

Denied his motion by Justice Ferdinand Pecora, Stryker arose to confront Weinberg. His voice sharp and indignant, he first prompted the witness to admit that everyone at the alleged 1932 conference, except him and Hines, were dead.

Then, confronting Weinberg with testimony from a federal court trial in which he denied having business relations with Dutch Schultz, Stryker made the uneasy racketeer admit he had lied in that trial—lied to save $24,000, Weinberg added.

"Would you lie to save your liberty?" Stryker demanded.

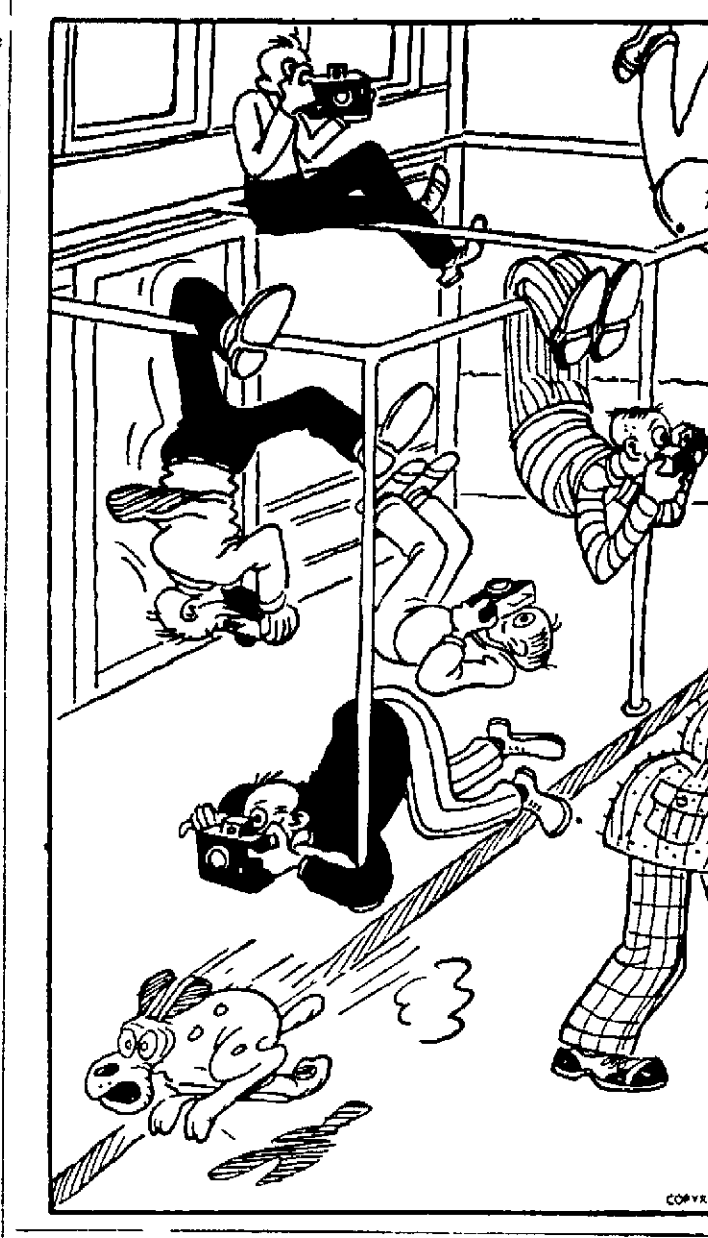

"I don't know whether I would or not," Weinberg answered.

"That is all," Stryker told the court. Asked a few minutes later if he was satisfied with the outcome of the day's testimony, he said, "oh, gosh, yes."

The special election on the school issue was one of eight approved by the tax commission, providing for balloting on more than $1,000,000 in bond issues. The Mansfield project is the largest of the eight involved in the bond issue elections.

In their second campaign in behalf of the bond issue, school board members indicated they would urge persons of voting age to register so as to be eligible to vote on the bond issue.

The new registration period will open Friday and will continue until Sept. 15 for the special election on Sept. 20, election board officials said. Registrations and transfers of voters are handled at the election board office in the basement of the courthouse.

New residents in the city, persons who have reached 21 years of age since the last election and those who have not voted at the last two general elections must register to be eligible to vote at the special election or in November, election board members pointed out.

Rome Hears Dictator, Holy See Act to Settle Differences Over Youth Problem.

(By International News Service)

ROME—Negotiations between the Holy See and the Fascist government for peaceful solution of differences over the alleged political activities of Catholic Action, the church's youth organization, in order to avoid a rupture as serious as the one preceding conclusion of the Lateran treaty are secretly under way, International News Service revealed today.

The status of Catholic Action, the Italian race purity campaign and Italy's anti-Jewish drive were authoritatively understood to be the chief topics of the conversations.

Act Through Friend.

Characteristically, Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius are personally conducting the negotiations through Padre Tacchi Venturi, a friend of both, who was instrumental in bringing the later accord into being.

Father Venturi saw the Pope for an hour and a half last Friday. He interviewed Mussolini on Saturday and again on Tuesday, returning to Castel Gandolfo yesterday for exhaustive conversations with the pontiff.

Cardinal Pizzardo also is actively engaged in the conversations and International News Service was authoritatively informed he is drafting the pontiff's memorandum to Mussolini.

Meanwhile, the Italian government vigorously denies that the Fascist party issued general orders to its membership to choose between membership in Catholic Action and the party where a duplicate membership exists.

The party's leadership, however, makes no secret of the fact that it will insist, as provided in the Lateran treaty, that officials holding posts in both organizations will be required to sever affiliations with one or the other before Oct. 28, anniversary of the blackshirt march on Rome.

12 TO COMPETE IN HORSESHOE FINALS AT PROSPECT TODAY

Twelve men are entered in an adult horseshoe tournament to be staged at 6.30 p. m. today at Prospect park by the city playgrounds, according to Al Fendrick, playground director.

The men who will represent four parks, were selected through elimination tournaments conducted recently. Entered in the tournament are Charles Frank, Robert Cellis and R. Yearinger, Liberty park; Jordan Smith, Lloyd Fronts and Clyde Franks, Johns park; James Dunn, Fred Lucas and Earl Tarvan, North Lake park; and John Leistensneider, Charles Treece and Dana Moxley, Prospect park.

One man from each park will be entered in the singles matches and two will be entered in the doubles.

In a paddle tennis tournament staged Wednesday afternoon at the Carpenter school playground, two girls walked off with all honors. The winners were Mary Vogel and Viola Myers. Miss Vogel won the singles event and paired with Miss Myers to win the doubles event.

Other events planned for the different grounds today, according to Fendrick, are a hike for the girls of North Lake park and a picnic supper and watermelon feast for children of the Carpenter grounds at 4 p. m. today at South park.

Two games were played yesterday in the playgrounds' kittenball and baseball leagues. In a bantam league baseball game, Johns park defeated Liberty park, 7 to 3, and in the championship kittenball league, Johns park beat Prospect park, 7 to 6. Until yesterday Prospect park was undefeated in 10 games this season.

POPE AND DUCE NEGOTIATE FOR 'PEACE,' CLAIM

Rome Hears Dictator, Holy See Act to Settle Differences Over Youth Problem.

(By International News Service)

ROME—Negotiations between the Holy See and the Fascist government for peaceful solution of differences over the alleged political activities of Catholic Action, the church's youth organization, in order to avoid a rupture as serious as the one preceding conclusion of the Lateran treaty are secretly under way, International News Service revealed today.

The status of Catholic Action, the Italian race purity campaign and Italy's anti-Jewish drive were authoritatively understood to be the chief topics of the conversations.

Act Through Friend.

Characteristically, Premier Mussolini and Pope Pius are personally conducting the negotiations through Padre Tacchi Venturi, a friend of both, who was instrumental in bringing the later accord into being.

Father Venturi saw the Pope for an hour and a half last Friday. He interviewed Mussolini on Saturday and again on Tuesday, returning to Castel Gandolfo yesterday for exhaustive conversations with the pontiff.

Cardinal Pizzardo also is actively engaged in the conversations and International News Service was authoritatively informed he is drafting the pontiff's memorandum to Mussolini.

Meanwhile, the Italian government vigorously denies that the Fascist party issued general orders to its membership to choose between membership in Catholic Action and the party where a duplicate membership exists.

The party's leadership, however, makes no secret of the fact that it will insist, as provided in the Lateran treaty, that officials holding posts in both organizations will be required to sever affiliations with one or the other before Oct. 28, anniversary of the blackshirt march on Rome.

Premium Payments, Despite Claim Jump.

(By United Press)

COLUMBUS—Despite increases in claims and claims costs during 1937, the state industrial commission announced today that premium rates for employers would be reduced an average of one percent for the year beginning July 1, 1938.
Thomas Gregory, commission chairman, said the reductions applied only to classifications in which accident costs had shown a decline. Rates in 231 classifications were unchanged; in 95 they were raised, and cuts were ordered in 76.Rates per $100 of payroll range from five cents for office employees to $20 for structural steel workers. Changes for 1938 vary from five cents to three dollars.
The commission's report for 1937 showed 237,000 new claims filed as compared with 204,000 in 1936. During 1937 premiums totaled $20,531,783, an increase of nearly $4,000,000 over 1936.

During the same period, total assets of the workmen's compensation fund increased nearly $5-000,000 to $55,702,909. Of this,
Gregory said, more than $47,800-
000 has been earmarked for future payments on claims approved during the last 10 years.Gregory attributed the increase in costs during 1937 to the revival of claims approved during thelast 10 years which had lain dormant prior to the business recession.
Benefits amounting to $14,874,085 were paid during the year to workmen and dependents of deceased workmen.Try a Mansfield News-Journal

CHAPTER 19

When Noel saw Julian standing at the entrance of the Peacock waiting for her, it seemed as if her heart leaped right up into her throat. For a moment she didn't know what to do or say.

Chris was standing there, his eyes questioning. Finally, Noel gained control of herself, and presented him to Julian. Then she said, "I'm so sorry. You see I—hadn't any idea that Doctor Paige—"

"I quite understand," Chris said coolly, and moved away.

Then Noel's eyes found Julian's again. And she knew that Chris didn't matter. A thousand Chris Landers couldn't matter. Julian was here. He had cared enough to find her. Her heart was suddenly singing like a nightingale under the stars.

Julian was angry. Noel knew that. But even this fact could not overshadow her joy at seeing him again. The only thing of which she was really conscious at the moment was the fact that he was here after all the desert of the days that had passed.

Then she heard him speak, saying calmly, "I am sorry about your friend. Perhaps I'm the one who should give way."

"Oh, no—no, Julian," she said hurriedly.

He moved up then and took her arm. "Shall we go?"

At his touch, Noel was conscious of a rush of feeling which threatened almost to overwhelm her. Now that Julian had come, all of her worries had been quickly relegated to the background of her thoughts. Her hatred of this garish club, Nick's disapproving eyes, even the look of hurt disappointment on Chris' boyish face—was it only tonight that she had tried to convince herself that in time she could care for Chris?

And then she and Julian were going out into the cool, star-sprinkled night. There wasn't a moon, but never had the stars shone with such brilliance.

There was Julian's shabby car parked under a street light. She recognized it with a little thrill.

Julian said nothing as he helped her into the seat. Even in the semi-darkness, Noel could see that his face had a pale, set expression. Was he really as angry as he seemed?

Noel managed a little laugh at last and said, "How did you know where to find me?"

"I waited, hoping you'd get in touch with me, as you had promised," Julian began. "Called you over the phone a number of times. You never called back so—"

Noel drew in her breath sharply. Julian had called her. A number of times he had said. Then there was only one thing that could have happened. Mrs. Blarson had forgotten to tell her. The rooming house keeper was getting more absent-minded all the time, or else she didn't care whether messages were delivered or not.

"When I didn't hear from you," Julian continued, "I did the only thing left for me to do. I asked Laurie where I could find you."

Julian's voice was controlled, but it had a cold, steeley quality that frightened her a little. He was still angry, but she could see that he had himself well in hand. Would she ever be able to explain, to make him understand?

"Julian," she began timidly, "I—I hope—that is—" but she stopped because she couldn't think of just how she should begin the explanation.

His expression was so unpromising. He looked so stern and—and unyielding.

"You see there—are several things I want to explain," she managed to say at last.

"Yes?" Julian's voice came coolly. He did not look at her. Then, before she could find the courage to go on, he asked: "Where do you live? You'll have to tell me now since I'm taking you there."

She gave him the number on Court street in a voice that was a little shaky. She hadn't wanted Julian to see the rather down-at-the-heel place where she lived. It would only make him try harder than ever to persuade her to go back to her old life. And, too, she had a feeling of pride about it. This was the only place she had yet been able to afford on her earnings. And she had made such proud boasts.

Julian turned the car toward Court street. He drove smoothly and not too fast, and maintained a rigid silence. It was as if there were a stone wall between them, which she couldn't break through in order to reach him. The silence seemed to grow more and more ominous.

Finally she said in a voice that held a tiny note of desperation. "Julian, I can explain really. Please don't look like that."

"There isn't any explanation," he said coldly. "Facts have an odd way of speaking for themselves."

Noel drew a sharp breath, which was almost like a pain. It was going to be more difficult to explain, to win him over than she had expected. For she saw now that his attitude was absolutely unbending. He didn't appear as if he had any intention of listening to her, much less believe in what she had to say. What could she do? What could she say? She had to think fast. She couldn't let him leave her in this angry, unyielding mood. And in a few minutes the car would be stopping.

Suddenly her throat was aching dreadfully. Many, many times in her imagination she had pictured herself sitting here beside him in the shabby car, Julian smiling and happy, his dark eyes seeking hers with warmth and something akin to tenderness. And now—

She was afraid he would never believe anything else but that she had deliberately lied to him as to where she was working and the nature of the work. He was like that. Everything to him was always simple. It had to be one way or the other. There were no deviations with Julian.

Of course she had permitted him to have a misconception of things, but not because she had really wanted him to. Only because she had failed so miserably in getting the place she had wanted at the Garwoods, and was still hopeful and almost confident of getting another place similar to that one. It wasn't her fault that she had not been able to find another place like the one he had approved of. And she couldn't bear for him to know that so far she had been almost a total loss at making her own living.

They were in front of the Court street house now. Julian stopped the car. Noel hesitated and did not get out immediately. In another minute he would be driving off with a curt goodnight, which probably meant goodbye as well. She couldn't bear it. She couldn't!

But to her surprise, when Julian stepped out to help her from the car, he did not get back in the seat. Instead, he took a small black bag from a compartment in the car. Then they were walking together toward the house.

"You're going in?" she asked, mystified.

"Yes."

"But Julian, I—that is—the landlady—" Noel was puzzled beyond words.

"You seem to be forgetting my profession. Your landlady or anybody else could have no possible objection to my going with you to your apartment or room or wherever it is that you live. You see, I'm going to have a look at your foot. I'm almost certain you have rubbed a bad blister on your heel."

"Oh!" Noel gasped. So he had noticed that. It was true she had been conscious of pain, but she thought it was because the shoes were too stiff.

"You were having such a happy time, you probably didn't even realize that one of your heels was blistered. I could tell the way you walked on it when we came out."

They had entered the room now. Julian didn't even glance around. He just sat down at her feet and said quietly, "Take off your sandal and stocking."

She obeyed. There was a blister, quite a large one.

Julian reached for a roll of medicated cotton and a small blue bottle containing some kind of antiseptic. In a few minutes he had her heel neatly bandaged.

"Now be careful and don't get an infection. There's always some danger, you know."

Laurie awoke and sat up in bed, her dark hair tousled about her small freckled face. "Is Noel sick? Anything wrong with her?"

Julian shook his head. "She'll be as good as new in the morning. No need to worry, Laurie."

Then he went over to Laurie and put his hand on her head. "You don't look any too perky yourself, young lady. Oh, you girls, if you will rip around all night—"

"Laurie never does that," Noel told him quickly.

Julian looked at her as if to say, "Well, I know you do," and then moved to the door with his bag.

Noel followed him out into the hall, limping a little. They faced each other on the porch. "So it was just a lark after all, wasn't it?" Julian said a little bitterly.

"No, Julian, honestly, it wasn't," Noel exclaimed. But it was quite evident he didn't believe her, for he started walking on to the car, regardless of her little cry. "Wait just a minute—please."

RING BELLS ON STORK'S VISITS

German Town Lands on Scheme for More Children.

REHREN, Rhineland — (AP) — They're going to ring the bells in the new schoolhouse every time a child is born in Rehren.

It's all down in black and white in the parish archives.

"Germany will never go under and remains always young so long as many children are born to her. We should therefore all be interested when a young German brother is born."

"For this reason when such a happy event takes place the bells in our district shall ring."

OHIO ELECTION BOARDS LAUDED

State Official Declares Aug. 9 Primary Was 'Cleanest' In Long Period of Time.

(By International News Service) COLUMBUS—The Aug. 9 primary was the "cleanest" election within his recollection, said George Neffner, chief statistician in the secretary of state's office.

"Outside of a few minor irregularities," he said, "it was a very quiet election. The usual flood of post-election complaints which come in by mail has not been present."

Neffner believes that a "superior class of precinct officials aided in conducting the primary along commendable lines."

However, he added that Secretary of State William J. Kennedy intends to strive for still greater efficiency in the future and will suggest to the various boards that only the "highest type of precinct workers be appointed."

"Kennedy," Neffner said, "was particularly pleased with the speed with which returns were sent to his office. Unofficial complete returns were in by 2 p. m. Wednesday, the day after the election. In many states it is three, four or even five days before complete unofficial returns are in."

Neffner said that Cuyahoga county with an unusually heavy poll was to be congratulated for the way in which a "small staff" managed to compile the returns and report in such short time.

RUSTLERS IN BAY STATE

ATTLEBORO, Mass. — (U.P.) — Cattle rustlers have stolen a calf from Antone Vincent's farm. Automobile tire marks indicated the means used by the thieves. Several other cattle thefts have been reported in Bristol county, which has many dairy farms.
